concept note:

We often notice that people speak differently. Sometime, the way we speak at home is not the way we speak at School or college. While travelling via train or bus we hear several people speaking in several ways. Intermittently, we understand them or we don't! At a micro level, we see that this language variation happens within a family albeit according to the linguists', language changes in every 14 kilometers approximately (macro level). Linguistics aims to describe and document these variations from micro to macro levels. Have you ever wondered how many languages are spoken in this universe? According to the Ethnologue (2016) database of languages the total number of living languages is 7097.

The major aim of this workshop is to popularise and spread awareness about linguistics among the undergraduate students of the country so as to encourage them to take up higher education and research in Linguistics. (Kumar 2014). In continuation to the series of such workshops held at B. R Ambedkar University, Agra, this workshop is proposed for the undergraduate students across the colleges of Murshidabad, who would like to take up Linguistics at postgraduate level and thereafter. The workshop is divided into two parts. In the first day, there will be a talk on basic linguistics and on the second day, students will be trained in data collection, methodology and data presentation. Simultaneously, they are likely to be trained in a few documentation tools which will further help them to document their local language and culture.

Please Note:

- 1. Last Date of Registration: 14th Dec'16.
- 2. Due to limited seats only 60 participants could be involved in the workshop.
- 3. Registration on first come first serve.

CONCEPT NOTE

We often notice that people speak in different ways. Sometime, the way we speak at home is not the way we speak at schools or colleges. While travelling via a train or a bus, we hear several people speaking in several ways. Intermittently, we understand them or we don't! At a micro level, we see that this language variation happens within a family albeit according to the linguists language changes in every 14 kilometers approximately (macro level). Linguists aim to describe and document these variations from micro to macro levels. The process of documentation requires a fair amount of knowledge in technology and work in a lab-based environment for data analysis. Have you ever wondered how many languages are spoken in this universe? According to the Ethnologue(2016) database of languages, the total number of living languages is 7097.

The major aim of this workshop is to popularize and spread awareness about Linguistics among the undergraduate Students of the country so as to encourage them to take up Higher education and research in linguistics.
